

That building used to be Javad's father's shop during the era NEP (New Economical Politics)

The house that belonged to Gadji Alibali, Javad's grandfather

The house where Javad's father lived and where the artist was born (7, B. Sardarov's street)

Wallpaper that speaks of protection of national heritage that features Javad's portrait, Baku, 2006

The last house to the right down Mustafayev's street where Mirjavadov's family moved to after expropriation

The house where Javad used to live since, 1964-1992, Baku 13B, A. Alekperov's street, apartment 29, second floor to the left